Summary: Training Session

Getting Started

This five-session introductory Guided Therapy explores the framework for how staff approach improving their mental health and building resilience. staff will explore basic mental health concepts, such as the Mental Health Continuum, and apply them to their situation.

Understanding Your Moods

This six-session Training Module explores the reasons behind a staff's moods. staff learn to examine their moods and reactions to improve their self-awareness, find their patterns, develop strategies, and start proactively managing their moods.

Behavior Strategies

This six-session Training Module explores different behavior strategies that staff can use to start to manage their moods, increase relaxation, or get into the zone. The first four sessions introduce a behavior strategy to the staff and allow them to try it out and see if it works for them before setting a practice goal to complete before the next session.

Thought Strategies

This six-session Training Module explores how to change negative or distorted thought patterns. staff will start to examine the connection between their thoughts and moods, before taking them through the basics of gaining an awareness of automatic negative thoughts and balancing those thoughts to become more positive, realistic, and productive.

Part 1: Reconnecting with the Body

This five-session Training Module focuses on the foundations of Mindfulness-Based Cognitive Therapy (MBCT) and reconnecting people with their senses. Staff's develop their ability to focus and stay present. By connecting with their present experience, with curiosity and without judgment, staff shift away from automatic thought patterns that might be impacting how they feel.

Part 2: Focused Attention

This five-session Training Module builds on the foundations of Part 1. Here staff continue to develop their mindfulness skills, diving into the wandering mind, where it goes, and how we react to it to deepen their self-awareness.

Part 3: Everyday Mindfulness

In this final five-session Training Module we bridge the gap between meditation practice and bringing mindfulness into your daily lives. Supporting staff to start building mindfulness practice into their routines.

I'm constantly worried that I'm going to get infected and pass it along to my family & friends. It's been difficult to make sacrifices to see fewer people to limit risk.
